Statistical Significance Thresholds

Below you may select a demographic to find the thresholds for statistically significant differences between groups (i.e. the minimum difference between groups to be considered statistically significant based on the sample sizes). Use the drop down menu to the right to select demographic dimensions. If there were no responses within a specific demographic option, that option will not appear in the dashboard.

Comparison of Responses by Respondent Characteristics

The comparison tables contain the cross tabulations of selected survey questions by respondent characteristics. Responses have been summarized to show only the proportion of respondents giving a positive answer; for example, the percent of respondents who rated the quality of life as excellent or good. For each pair of subgroups that has a statistically significant difference, an upper-case letter denoting significance is shown in the category with the larger column proportion. The letter denotes the category with the smaller column proportion from which it is statistically different. The values for these differences between subgroups are organized by characteristic in the dropdown menu of the "Statistical Significance" tab. Ratings that have no upper-case letter denotation in their column and that are also not referred to in any other column were not statistically different from each other.
